For this photo illustration, I aimed to create a graphic that highlighted our school's track athlete who broke an all-state record. Using the Canva application, I began with a blank template and imported a photo I had taken earlier that year. I then added a white border and made it appear like a real Instagram post. I did the same for another photo that had the subject posing next to his record-breaking flags. I then imported real Instagram and Facebook posts that highlighted him breaking the record. I then used the blur tool to make a few of the images not pop as much. I used the fonts "Zumme Rough Bold" and "Mistrully" for text at the top and the smaller information in the lower left corner. To add depth to the design, I applied shadows to nearly every element. I then rearranged everything until I was satisfied with the layout. Finally, I imported an element of hoof prints for design purposes behind the main graphic. Once the graphic was complete, I had put in a little more than two hours of work.
