

This is a piece I created in late November or so; it only took me about 2 hours to complete! I used the app Procreate on my Ipad. I began with a completely blank slate; no outside materials were used in the making of this artwork. I first started with a simple sketch of the character and the cart, but soon I got the idea to make this a hit piece! Sometime back in April 2025, there was an art show competition. To make a long story short, the person who ended up winning first and best of show...won with a piece that was completely ripped off the internet. It was nothing more than a 1:1 scale replica, so, in my opinion, they shouldn't have won. They're a fraud. I created this editorial cartoon to draw attention to this artistic deceit. While it doesn't outright say they're a fraud, the title of this piece is: Farr Co. Photo Copier. Not only that, but I'm submitting this piece for the same art show this year. Maybe someone will catch the hint.
