Gift You Would Like to Receive on Valentines Day

I created an infographic about Valentine's Day. Before I even started creating my design, I conducted surveys and sent them out to the students at my school. I then started making my design. I started with a blank slate on Canva. I then changed the background to a soft pink color to match the Valentine's Day theme. I asked three different questions on my survey, so I knew I needed a way to display the different information. I first asked the question, "What is your relationship status?" I took the information and made a pie chart. My next question was, "What gift would you like to receive on Valentine's Day?" I used a pre-made bar chart, and then changed the information according to the results of my survey. My final question was, "What is your favorite candy heart saying?" There were six options to choose from, so I used a heart icon from Canva, then I changed the colors and added the different sayings. I then varied the sizing of the hearts based on the results of the poll. For instance, "Cutie Pie" had the most votes, so it had the largest size of heart. I then spaced them out evenly throughout my page. I then had a lot of blank spots that I had to fill, so I added a quote, a fun fact, and some Valentine's Day-themed icons. I created a color palette that consisted of different shades of red and pink, and stuck to those for my whole infographic.
